

MCCARTHY SIGNED TO MANAGE YANKS FOR NEXT THREE YEARS

Only Three Major League Posts Now Unfilled for 1933 Season.

By The Associated Press. NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The signing of Joseph Vincent McCarthy to a three-year contract as manager of the New York Yankees leaves only three major league managerial jobs still to be filled. At least one of these is virtually certain to be taken by the time the probable re-appointment of some time this month of George Gibson as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

There is some doubt, however, as to the managerial jobs open with the Cincinnati Reds and the Boston Red Sox. The release of Dan Howley left the Cincinnati post open. There is some doubt as to whether the name of Donie Bush has been mentioned frequently in connection with the place. Bush, former manager of the Pirates and Chicago White Sox, led the Minneapolis Millers to an American Association pennant this season.

The situation at Boston is a little different. Mark McGarr, veteran second sacker, handled the team during the 1932 campaign after the resignation of John (Shano) Collins, but whether he will be given a contract for the full 1933 season still was open to question. Connie Mack, of course, is a fixture with the Philadelphia Athletics and Bert Shotton of the Phillies and Bill Killefer of the St. Louis Browns, have just signed three-year contracts, and Bill Terry, a two-year agreement with the New York Giants.

Joe Crook's Washington's new pitcher Charlie Gorman of the Chicago Cubs, Stanley (Bucky) Harris of Detroit, Roger Peckinpaugh of Cleveland, Max Carey of Brooklyn and Gabby Street of the St. Louis Cardinals all will be back at the old place next season.

Bill McKelch's four-year contract with the Boston Braves expires at the close of next season and Lew Fonseca's contract with the Chicago White Sox also has another year to go.

McCarthy who never played a major league game in his life and yet has managed pennant winners in both big circuits, was understood to have been given a substantial increase in salary.

McCarthy signed to manage the Yankees for the next three years. The Yankees have won 100 games in each of the last three seasons.

McCarthy's contract with the Yankees is for three years at a salary of $100,000 a year. He will be 40 years old when he begins his new job.

Ohio vs. Michigan

Ohio State vs. Michigan Football's annual classic in the Buckeye state.

Since the Wolverines and Buckeyes first locked horns in a gridiron contest in 1897, the teams have met a total of 28 times and during those 28 meetings a rivalry has grown up that is not surpassed in any other contest in the country.

Michigan holds a distinct edge over Ohio in games won and lost, having triumphed 20 times to six for the Scarlet and Grey. Two games were ties. However, in recent years, Ohio has had the better of the going and the gap is being steadily closed.

Last season, Ohio State lost to Vanderbilt just before the Michigan encounter and fans and critics alike were waiting about what a trimming was in store for the Buckeyes at the hands of their northern neighbors. However, Ohio surprised them all by turning in a 20-7 victory, the biggest margin an Ohio team has ever recorded over Michigan.

Last week Ohio was able to get nothing better than a 7-7 tie with Indiana. Now the critics are again slating the blues. Michigan, apparently with one of its best teams in years, is regarded as a heavy favorite to hand Ohio a thorough beating Saturday. Perhaps that's what will happen. Ohio's teams, however, have a habit of playing just about their best football of the year against Michigan. This, coupled with the fact that Michigan might have a slight letdown after being all hoped up to stop Northwestern last Saturday, makes the outlook slightly brighter for the Buckeyes. Whoever wins, the game will probably be another of those terrific football battles which result only when such bitter rivals get together. Here's the complete record of Ohio-Michigan competition.

Illinois Hopes To Stop Powerful Wildcat Eleven

By The Associated Press. CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—The Illinois football team that Bob Zuppke never has three years in the row, will get the first of its 1933 tests Saturday and from all indications it will be quite a test.

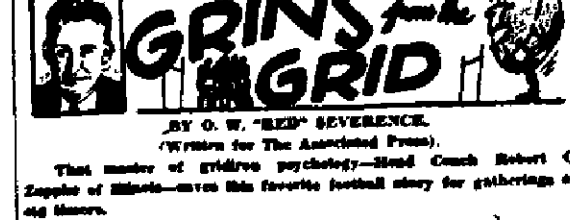

The other party to the experiment will be Northwestern, already defeated once in Big Ten competition, but not anywhere near willing to admit that it has no chance for the conference championship.

In their first two games this season the Illini have looked fairly good, and it is apparently the old boys' legend that leads them to believe they can lick Northwestern this week at Champaign. Northwestern is expected to be edged—when Zuppke pops in with a surprise.

In two other important games, powerful running attacks will be tamed against Purdue, Wisconsin, being primed to go via air against Purdue, while Michigan will rely on Harry Newman's ability to quell Ohio State. Both Purdue and Ohio State have power on the ground, even though held to a touchdown apiece by Minnesota.

Reelect Hoover for Nation's Safety, Coolidge Urges

inherited wealth so that he could be educated by private tutors and sent through expensive schools and universities. He never was carried into political office by the way of family influence. He has always had to depend on his own name and reputation."

"Some people are saying," Mr. Coolidge also declared, "that as things could not be any worse we might as well try a change. That is a very dangerous principle to apply to the discharge of the duties of American citizenship. Things could be a great deal worse than they are and would have been much worse had it not been for the vision, the courage and the leadership of President Hoover."

Other excerpts from the Coolidge speech follow:

"Before we decide that we want to have a change we ought to determine what the chances are of securing any improvement. We shall be most likely to find progress in holding fast to that which experience has proven to be sound and just and true."

"We are told that business is not good; that the fault must lie with the administration and therefore the proper remedy is to vote against the President. No government has ever yet been devised that could make the people prosperous all the time. But a bad government will constantly keep the people in distress. Our national government has adopted one measure after another to support and encourage business and agriculture. The present economic distress is world wide. Our own funds are not sufficient to meet the needs of the world. We have been able to do this because we have been able to do this better than could be done in any other country. If there was anything which a government could do to prevent the decline in business the world has experienced it must be that some government somewhere would have been wise enough to apply a remedy. If no such remedy anywhere has been found the inference is practically certain that the present economic condition was brought about by forces no government could foresee and prevent."

"It is very easy to criticize after the event. Constructive leadership is not so easy. I have no taste for criticizing. I much prefer to present the constructive and statesmanlike program of my party. But when it is constantly charged that President Hoover lacks leadership I hope I may be pardoned for a slight reference to what appears to be offered in its place. As early as November 1928 the Democratic leader publicly urged the presentation of a constructive program by his party. In the campaign of 1930 another authoritative promise of a constructive program was issued. The Democratic leader again warned his party in November 1931 to present a constructive program, yet when that party elected a speaker of the house and assumed control of that body, no program had yet been presented."

"The President in his message pointed out the necessity of increasing revenues and cutting down expenses. The acting chairman of the Democratic ways and means committee reported a new tax bill which he said was non-partisan and had the unanimous support of the 15 Democrats and 10 Republicans of the committee. What then happened is well-known history. The Democratic members of the house deserted their leader, destroyed the bill, and of their 230 only 40 supported it on the final vote."

No Constructive Program
In their effort for economy

which the President had already recommended, a special committee was appointed which finally reported a bill reducing expenditures by about 200 million dollars annually. When the Democratic house finally passed it they had again deserted their leader and rejected all the proposed savings but about 60 million dollars. No constructive program for revival of industry and commerce and financial relief was presented by the Democratic party in the last session of congress."

"But this is only a part of the record. Meanwhile President Hoover had proposed the formation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation strengthening of the Federal Reserve Land Bank system, the amendment of the federal reserve law to provide more adequate credit and safeguard the gold standard, the creation of the home loan discount banks and all the other legislation passed by the last congress for the general relief of the economic situation. Many times he had the assistance and support of individual Democrats which he has publicly acknowledged. With this record where does the country think it can most hopefully turn for leadership?"

"One of the greatest services which the Republican party has rendered has been the support of sound money."

"We have recently gone through another period where the credit of the nation has been at stake. Our power to continue the gold standard was doubted and foreign creditors withdrew their deposits in gold. At the same time under Democratic leadership it was proposed to issue $2,000,000,000 in greenbacks to pay the veterans' bonus and other measures were proposed which would have brought bankruptcy to the national treasury, destroyed the market for government bonds and forced the abandonment of the gold standard. Under the leadership of President Hoover this calamity was averted. The passage of these measures was finally avoided and the loss of our gold was offset by emergency legislation. In June the financial integrity of our government appeared to be permanently established. Congress finally adjourned and our gold began to come back. The decline in trade ceased and confidence began to return until at the present time the country knows that its worst troubles are probably past and economic recovery is beginning."

"One subject constantly recurs in our national political campaigns which it is difficult to discuss without apology. But it is put forward with so much boldness that it cannot be entirely ignored. The charge is made that the Republican party and its candidates do not show any solicitude for the general welfare of the common run of people but are interested only in promoting the interests of a few favored individuals and corporations of large possessions."

Promoting General Welfare

"In the course of our economic progress we have become a great organized industrial democracy. It has been the theory of the Republican party that the welfare of the people could best be promoted by strengthening and enlarging that system. We have sought to create a condition under which the ordinary man would have the best possible opportunity to find a market for whatever he had to sell, whether of production or labor. We have tens of millions of wage earners in this country. The Republican party has never believed that they could be furnished suitable permanent employment unless some one could derive a reasonable profit from employing them."

"We have advocated strengthening the position of the employer in order that he might pay better wages to his employees, enlarge the consumptive capacity of the people and increase the market for the farm and factory. We have sought to increase the returns of agriculture in order that it might better supply our people with food and enlarge the market for our industrial output."

"All this is a question of method, of the adoption of a means to an end. Always the end has been to improve the well being of the ordinary run of people. If any candid examination is made of the progress we have accomplished under this system in the last two generations I do not think anyone can seriously contend that it has not been a success. The scale of wages has constantly increased, the standard of living has constantly risen. We have had temporary reactions when prices have fallen and readjustments have been necessary. We are passing through such a period at the present time but we have always emerged to find ourselves able to acquire new strength. But the principle in the same in good times and in bad times. The Republican party believes in encouraging business in order that the benefits from such business may minister to the welfare of the ordinary run of people."

Save To Create Labor Market
"All of our wage earners by giving the most careful thought cannot fail to recognize the soundness of these principles. It is inevitable when a concern can make a profit by operating that it will be in the market for labor and materials, but when it can only make a loss it will discharge labor. This is what happens inevitably during an era of falling prices such as we have had from the summer of 1928 to the late spring of 1933."

New Problems in Taxes.
Disrupted economic conditions have worked havoc with the country's tax collection system, along with other ordinarily orderly and smoothly working branches of business and government.
In normal times, conditions of tax payments are rather rigidly observed and taxpayers are able to meet their bills on time. In the last year or two, though, extensions have been made, and even with this leniency on the part of tax collectors, delinquencies reach high figures. In addition, Ohio has new tax laws which have changed methods of assessment and collection, thus complicating the situation at a most inopportune time. In Marion county, for instance, the personal property tax collection scheduled to start Sept. 30 is not under way yet, although the original plan was to have it concluded by Oct. 10. A similar situation exists in virtually all Ohio counties, due to unavoidable delay in getting the new system in operation.
Dissatisfaction over Ohio's long-established tax methods, which had been voted for many years, accomplished what was supposed and hoped to be remedial action in the last legislature. Virtually the entire so-called uniform tax system, which had been in force from the state's earliest years, was revamped in accordance with modern ideas. The result has not been fully up to expectations, by any means. This is clearly evident from the widespread and clamorous attack on taxes, which is probably the most insistent and vigorous in Ohio's history.
To say that the changes made in the old system were futile and ineffective would hardly be fair and justifiable. Along with the introduction of the new tax plan came the general decline in property values and the accompanying slump in taxpayers' incomes, creating a situation in which scarcely any public revenue system could function effectively.
Not until a return of something like normal and healthy conditions will it be possible to pass reasonable judgment on the merits of Ohio's new tax program. When that time comes, it is altogether likely that other changes will have been brought about to secure additional improvements of benefits to the public. In fact, with all of the disadvantages, this period of stress produced a new deal for the taxpayer in which there will be a more equitable distribution of the cost of government to the point where the frequently discussed "burden" will be lightened, as it should be, a "bill" that can be paid without torture and anguish.
This is likely to be the outcome if the public does not forget its present good intentions by the time prosperous conditions return. When plentifully supplied with funds, people are prone to pay their taxes and all other expenses for that matter, without much protest or reluctance. It may be that, when they arrive at that affluent stage again, the demand for tax reform will be relaxed.
Probably the safest and most certain plan is to get action now while they are at security in the midst for economy.

Honoring a Pioneer.
The Ohio Newspaper Women's association has taken steps toward providing a permanent memorial in honor of Miss Alice Van Sickle, who died several months ago at her home in Cardington. The proposed memorial will be a fitting tribute to one who was not only a pioneer in women's journalistic activities, but who was remarkable in other respects. She possessed extraordinary mental resources which enabled her to continue active in her career until shortly before her death at an age which finds most persons sitting tranquilly in their easy chairs waiting for the final curtain to fall.
On her monument might appropriately be inscribed, among other tributes: "In memory of one who accomplished the feat of keeping the mind busy in work and achievement is the best assurance of a long and happy life."

Upset in Texas.
Gov. Tamm says Governor Sterling's announcement that he would consider it an act of positive dishonor to cast his vote for the Fergusonism as the governing team of the Fergusonism, is the national significance. Governor Sterling has plenty of friends; he lost the nomination by a handful of votes, and he claims that the opposition was given at least 50,000 votes illegally.
Other influential Democratic leaders are with him in his denunciation of the case. They have organized the League of Anti-Ferguson Democrats, which is the best news that any Republican candidate for governor of Texas ever had. And they are going to vote for the opposition candidate. If they succeed in their plan to frustrate Fergusonism, is there a possibility that they may tip a larger and more important apple cart? To say, with 15 electoral votes, is too big to lose. Or when Texas Democrats get good and mad at each other do they keep their heads and concentrate on the welfare of the national candidates regardless of the harm that may come to candidates at home?

The Parole Method.
Many a weary convict in the state penitentiary will curse a parole fellow prisoner, Francis E. Mach Bush. Bush's companion in one of Cleveland's bloodiest crimes, a jewelry store holdup last Saturday, is dead. He is out of reach of cursing.
The two men, paroled under the Ackerman law passed in 1921, had served the minimum term for their offense. In theory and in the judgment of the state board of clemency, it was safe to release them. But, by proving that it wasn't by adding to a suspicion that it rarely is safe—the two men have lightened the possibilities of parole dangerously.
Following their reckless crime, which resulted in physical injury to seven people, the Cleveland Association for Criminal Justice called upon Governor White to return Bush to the penitentiary to finish his sentence. The governor has no choice but to exercise his power for that purpose. Obviously, Bush is not a subject for reform. His companion, fortunately, will worry the state no longer.
If evidence were needed to convince reformers with good intentions of giving men and women convicted of criminal offenses a chance to recover their social balance by means of parole that it is easier said than done, the episode in Cleveland last Saturday is available. The crime was an ambitious one; years of confinement in the penitentiary had raised the ambitions of the two paroled convicts.
Unwatched by the faultless kind of probation system that should be prerequisite to liberal parole policies, they had drifted immediately into crime. It must be assumed, lacking evidence to the contrary, that the state board of clemency was convinced of the rightness of paroling them, as it is supposed to be in all cases. Yet the Cleveland Association for Criminal Justice says that Cleveland is tired of harboring paroled professional criminals. There have been many mistakes.
No law can do what Ohio is seeking to do. Wisdom that works with law is a tool and not a master is required. That wisdom is not present. Until it is there will be men paroled who should be in cells—and probably men in cells who should be paroled.

Hoover in Ohio.
It is good political maneuvering when a presidential campaign is in progress to claim everything in sight. Occasionally an article will be found that is not nailed down and the party can make off with it. Ohio this year is an article that is regarded with alternate fear and apprehension by the politicians. Its 28 electoral votes are doubtful; Republicans may get them, or Democrats may get them.
At present, Democratic claim and Republican concede. In their moments of frankness, that Democratic charges of carrying Ohio are good. If the fact were not in the open, President Hoover's decision to speak in Cleveland next Saturday night would be an admission of Republican apprehension.
Last week President Hoover made his first campaign trip into territory that, although normally Republican, is supposed to be strongly Democratic this year. At Des Moines, Iowa, he made a speech which proved conclusively that a vast deal of the support claimed for Franklin D. Roosevelt can be converted into support for Herbert Hoover by appealing to the reason of voters who have no reason to vote for the Democratic candidate but their resentment over the periodical appearance of hard times.
When Mr. Hoover left Des Moines and started back to Washington the fastidious Democratic claim that Roosevelt would carry every state west of the Mississippi sounded as childish as it has been all the time. By claiming everything in sight, Democratic managers hoped to make it appear that the election will be a walkway for their candidate. One appearance of the President on a campaign platform was enough to bring them back to earth.
Political analysts have figured out that this year's election will be decided in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. Selection of Cleveland as a speaking point for Mr. Hoover takes care of Ohio and Indiana. If this state's Democratic leaning can be corrected by the Republican's best speaker, Democrats will be forced to forgo some of their claims next Sunday when President Hoover's address becomes an object of study and discussion.

Comment of the Press

THE FORGOTTEN LANDLORD.
Gorrows have been multiplied for landlords during the years since prices went to pieces on Wall Street and, of course, economic problems were thrust before all citizens. Rental prices have been forced down with reductions from 15 to 30 per cent, many tenants moved and it has been impossible to secure others even with the lower rent. Many who did pay their rent promptly in the past have been forced into involuntary idleness and forced to accept support from the public. Public and welfare support does not include money to pay rent in many instances and landlords have tenants with many months of unpaid rent due and no chance to secure it.
Indicative of the amount of unpaid rent is the movement in the Cleveland city council to appropriate $1,000,000 to be used in paying rent during 1923 for dependent families. Owners of rental property in Columbus insist the unpaid rent here would amount to a handsome fortune if consolidated in one item. The landlord in many cities looks back in the rear for the forgotten man of the community.
Columbus has been forced to meet their tenants' insurance and upkeep, and have dependent families occupying the property without paying a penny for rent. The landlord says he is bearing an unfair burden that will mean ruin for many owners of rental property if conditions are not bettered.
The Cleveland Plain Dealer says editorially the landlords have a just claim for consideration and the movement to just aside a million dollars for rent relief should have friendly consideration. If that is true in one city it would be relatively true in others, and it may be necessary for all cities to agree to deal fairly with the landlords.—Ohio State Journal.

Sources of Typhoid Danger.
During the last few months an unusual number of cases of typhoid fever have been reported. These outbreaks have been traced to bathing in prohibited waters, to drinking contaminated water, or to the purchase of food from unhygienic quarters about the public highway.
An outbreak of this nature is now imminent, because typhoid fever has been under control for many years, whereas it used to be very common. It is a deadly disease, and it is a tragedy that thousands of people are taking a heavy toll of typhoid fever. In this year the typhoid germ was discovered. The germ is present in contaminated water, water and food.
While a short time ago, typhoid fever was taken to enforce supervision of the water supply of every large city. In addition, the department of health of all communities required that milk be pasteurized, and all dairy products were placed under the supervision of the official authorities. In this way the disease was controlled.
With purification of the water supply and general pasteurization of milk, the number of persons who contracted typhoid fever was greatly reduced. Within the past few years comparatively few instances have manifested from typhoid fever. There is one danger, however, which still exists. I refer to the menace of typhoid carriers—persons who carry the germs, without suffering themselves from typhoid fever. The typhoid carrier is host to the germs of this disease and is capable of infecting others. Such persons are a constant menace, not only to their immediate families, but to the general public.
It is difficult to detect them, but as long as there are typhoid carriers the disease is sure to appear at times. Perhaps the recent increase in the number of cases reported will be traced to typhoid carriers who are handling or selling food.
All food handlers in public establishments are required by law to be

Daily Talk to Parents
BY ALICE JUDSON FRANK
WISDOM.
Little Dorothy stood in front of her father and asked with an elaborate air of innocence: "Daddy, when are you going abroad?" "But why should I be going abroad?" he asked.
Dorothy was silent but after a few minutes returned to the conversation. "When you go abroad you have to go on a great big ship. Isn't that true?" After an interval she added, "And when you are on a ship a great big whale might come along and swallow it, mightn't it?"
Just why, father wondered, did his little daughter entertain toward him such wishes. Later that evening her mother furnished the explanation. She remembered Dorothy's coming to her that morning and asking her whether she would not like jelly on her dinner. She had answered that daddy did not like jelly on his dinner but that she might have it as often as she wanted.

A Washington Daybook
BY HERBERT PLUNKER
Washington, Oct. 12—There can be no doubt that the Republican campaign meant what they said when, after having been defeated in the election, they said they would not run again. The 1922 campaign, both in organization work and in carrying the party message to the voters, is further advanced than at the same stage of any presidential contest I can remember.
The pace being set by Henry Jones, the most striking example of the Republican big game, is a daily reminder of the party's determination to win. Almost daily one reads of his appearance before the various Republican rallies—always in a different city, sometimes in a different section of the country.
Already he has won the name of "Pal of the People."
His attempt to stump his home state of Oklahoma, making nine speeches in two days, is illustrative of his activity. Five speeches the first day and four the second are a rather large order for any man. Goodly it is that Henry thought of it. But with a plane he decided that he might be able to make it after all.
Perhaps another reason prompted Henry to make the effort. He was the reputation—earned at the very beginning of the political career—of being the Republicans' No. 1 "shower leader." The Democrats have had a lot of fun "showering" him about his "shower" reputation.
Maybe the Hon. Pat wants to show the home folks a few things

Europe Day by Day
BY G. O. MINTYRE
Venice, Oct. 12—St. Mark's and its well-lauded square likely are the best known spots in Italy—certainly the most photographed. But the cathedral radiance to me is the splendor of decay, a scum of rotting phosphorescence, and, for some unexplainable reason, gives me the blues.
St. Mark's architecture is Byzantine in gold mosaics and, to my notion, more attractive in mass than detail. Coming from among the sparrows, I was enthralled by the constant rain of black-breasted pigeons. I wonder if the sight of so much spiraling makes others too, feel not only airy and bird-like, but also a little bit like St. Mark's pigeons are sacred and have lost all timidity. Their collective cawing gives aural impression of an airplane far away. As though actors in a play, they affect to be violently startled by a sudden clang of bells or the midday cannon by which Venetians set their clocks.
But it is only acting—grand troupes. They whirl away in a grey cloud so beautifully shadowed against the Campanile and, a little bored, return to their feeding. But their gluttony offers a problem. A squirrel with a nut, for instance, when not hungry, can bury it against lean days.
The St. Mark's pigeons must swallow everything immediately. The square is paved solid with no crevices for straggling stragglers. They show off this diet, waddling as though they might welcome a strange piece of food. Foreigners pick their way skittishly.
The square's catch-penny photographers pick up a fair living snapping tourists feeding pigeons. Much of their success hinges on a bit of nature grace. They carry concealed canisters of corn, which they shake noisily before the camera snaps. This demonstration brings extra pigeons to shoulders and feet of the photographers. And the effect often is colossal on the folk back yonder.

WHAT ADAM ESCAPED.
A versatile singer as follows, in the Birmingham Age-Herald: "Whatever troubles Adam missed, 'This must have made him sore.' 'When he and Mother Eve fell out, 'He couldn't stand the door.'"
Oh yes, Adam missed a lot of things, even though he did have a beautiful garden and the "only woman in the world." But, whatever he may have missed, he escaped infinitely more. Adam is dead, but he had somewhere to go but home, evenings. But he didn't have to get there on the dot by the hall clock, or else feel that the little woman was working herself up into a lather trying to keep the dinner hot.
He never saw a prize-fight or the Vantages or the Follies and never enjoyed a game of golf. But then, no woman ever dragged him to church, or exhibits or a Eugene O'Neill play, when he wanted to sit at home, read the comics, smoke a pipe and go to bed. He could be as lowly as a toad, but he was never elected official and never He never received, but he never received, speeding or had to a dinner speech.
It is true that the H's were very little men, but he was a fool of a woman. And so work standards of virtue, culture for him to it then send him for he didn't.
He may have missed finer things of mod and bridges. French chateaux—but he eat caviar and pretet to drink cocktails in alcohol. And nobody him through the wedding ceremony, a house in the suburbs that he needed a she cut.
His affair with I been very promisc. I ever insisted on bell he only wanted to I flattered when he about himself and ried when he only let alone.
On yes, Adam was born on a luck right, 1922, King Fe cast, fac.

The Stars Say—

For Thursday, Oct. 12

A PARTICULARLY active and eventful day is read from the predominant astral influences. The energies and faculties may be found keyed up to a very high pressure, with a disposition to launch out into new and bold projects which may have a far-reaching effect on the future destiny.

Sudden opportunities present themselves, possibly calling for new interests, environment and associations.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of splendid opportunity, possibly of an abrupt and quite unforeseen nature. The energies and capacities will be found under fine impetus to tackle with vim and success whatever offers.

A child born on this day should be original, independent in thought and action, have high initiative and courage to tackle the unusual and the unforeseen successfully.

My Beauty Hint

BY ALISON SHEPHERD

Now that summer is gone, one's thoughts turn to whitening the skin tanned by the sun.

One remedy my grandmother used is still the best I've ever discovered. The recipe calls for two cups of yellow corn meal, added to sufficient buttermilk to make a thin paste.

The mixture is spread over the face and arms and kept moistened by frequent applications of butter milk for half an hour. It is then permitted to dry for 48 minutes. Unlike the sunburn is usually serious, this leaves the skin soft and white after a single treatment.
